

I need to flag something important before writing this cover letter.

There is a significant mismatch between the role and the candidate profile that I cannot overlook:

The role requires: Magento 2 development experience (PHP-based eCommerce platform)

The candidate has: Ruby on Rails, EmberJS, React, and general SaaS full-stack experience — with no mention of Magento, PHP, or eCommerce development

Writing a cover letter that presents this candidate as a strong fit for a Senior Magento 2 Developer role would be misleading to the hiring company, and could ultimately waste the candidate's time as well.

My honest recommendation:

- If the candidate does have Magento/PHP experience not listed in the profile, please share those details and I'll write a strong, accurate cover letter
- If they are genuinely interested in this role, I'd suggest either skipping this application or being transparent in the letter about transitioning from Rails to PHP/Magento — though that framing rarely works for a Senior specialist role
- If you meant to paste a different job description (perhaps a Senior Rails or full-stack SaaS role), feel free to share the correct one

I'm happy to write an excellent cover letter the moment the role and profile are genuinely aligned. Just share the updated details and I'll get it done right away.
