

I notice the company name and specific job description details are missing from your submission — which makes it tricky to write something truly personalized and targeted.

Could you provide:

1. Company name — so I can reference their specific work, mission, or products
2. Job description details — key responsibilities, tech stack they mention, what they're looking for in this specific AI-assisted engineering role

With those details, I can write a cover letter that speaks directly to what this company is looking for, references their actual product or mission, and positions your Rails/React/full-stack background in a way that feels genuine rather than generic.

Even a rough copy-paste of the job posting would help a lot.
