

I notice the job description and company name appear to be blank in your request. To write a truly compelling and specific cover letter, I'd need:

- Company name – so I can reference their mission, products, or culture
- Job description – so I can align the candidate's experience with their specific requirements and language

A generic cover letter without these details would likely hurt more than help — hiring managers can immediately spot when a letter isn't tailored to them.

Could you share:

1. The company name and any details about what they do
2. The full job description (or key requirements/responsibilities)

Even a rough job posting copied and pasted would make a significant difference. With those details, I can write something that specifically connects this candidate's Ruby on Rails expertise, full-stack background, and leadership experience to what that particular company is actually looking for — rather than producing something that reads like every other cover letter in their inbox.
